REDFERN'S NAME ADDED TO LIST OF MISSING

NOW MORE THAN 24 HOURS OVERDUE AT RIO

HOPE THAT HE MIGHT SUCCEED ABANDONED AFTER MIDNIGHT

NEITHER SHIP NOR SHORE REPORTS SEEING INTREPID AVIATOR

Rio De Janeiro, Aug 29.—(UP)—Paul Redfern's name was added today to the list of missing fliers.

He was more than 24 hours overdue here on what was to have been a non-stop flight from Brunswick, Ga., in the monoplane Port of Brunswick.

Hope that the airman might succeed in his venture was abandoned shortly after midnight yesterday and after that officials waited word from coastal and interior towns regarding Redfern.

Wide and uncivilized areas lay between Redfern and his goal when he left Brunswick Thursday. Jungles and highlands had to be surmounted after the passage across the Carribbean. Neither ship nor shore had reported sight of the flier today.

Brazilian aviators hoped Redfern had reached the state of Goyaz where the terrain would be favorable for a landing. It was generally believed, however, that he had encountered a storm within a few hours after leaving the United States and that his hevaily laden plane had been swamped in blustering wind.

Arrangements to welcome Redfern had been completed and a large crowd of official and unofficial persons was gathered at the illuminated landing field here several hours before the flier was expected. The crowd was uneasy.

It seemed impossible that Redfern could have flown from Georgia to Rio De Janeiro without having been sighted several times, and even more unlikely that he could have arrived here without being seen at Macapa and Guarapa. When neither of these places had reported the flier at midnight anxiety was succeeded by belief that Redfern had met disaster.

Telegraphic inquiries have been sent to all parts of Brazil.

Boston, Aug. 29.—The Tropical Radio announced here today it had received from its Miami office the following message:

"Advised unofficially Redfern arrived Rio. Endeavoring to get report confirmed."

(The United Press had received to noon, (EDT) today no confirmation from any other source of the reported arrival of Paul Redfern in Rio De Janeiro).

Paul Redfern was missing, the Brock-Schlee around the world airplane was beyond the Atlantic on the European leg of its voyage and a Canadian plane had started from London, Ontario, to London, Eng., today.

Captain Terry Tully and Lieutenant James Metcalf left London, Ont., at 4:50 A. M. (EST) today in a Stinson-Detroiter monoplane named Sir John Carling. They returned later, however, forced to return by dense fog and rain which they encountered over Lake Ontario.

The American fliers who reached Croydon airport, 15 miles from London, yesterday morning, reported tail winds except off the Irish coast where they found a storm.

Redfern, en route from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio De Janeiro, was more than 24 hours overdue today. He had not been sighted since leaving Brunswick at 12:46 P. M. (EST) Thursday.

Schlee and Brock spent the night in London and left Croydon at 2:29 A. M. (EST) for Munich, Germany, arriving in mid-afternoon.

Charles A. Levine, who flew from New York to Germany with Chamberlin, flew from LeBourget field in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia alone today to Croydon airport and announced his intention of flying the plane across the Atlantic himself.

'U. S. RICHEST NATION AND POOREST PROTECTED'

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Declaring the "United States was the richest nation on earth and the poorest protected," National Commander Howard P. Savage urged the Illinois American Legion convention here today to reaffirm itself in favor of the national defense act of 1920.

"If war was suddenly to descend upon this nation," said Savage, you would witness battlefields bathed in blood; the result of a careless policy of national neglect.

"The Legion," he said, "knowing the folly of unpreparedness, has insisted and will continue to insist our national defense forces be maintained up to the standards prescribed by the defense act of 1920.

TRYING TO SOLVE BRUTAL KILLING AND ATTACK

MADISONVILLE, KY., AUTHORITIES AROUSED AND SEEKING CLUES

FRED RUSSELL FOUND DEAD IN CAR, PAULINE DEARMOND UNCONSCIOUS

Madisonvile, Ky., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Five youths had been arrested for questioning today and authorities worked from other angles in an attempt to solve the brutal killing of Fred Russell, 22, an attack on Pauline Dearmond, 16, which left her near death.

Miss Dearmond, who was engaged to marry Russell, was in an Evansville, Ind., hospital today in critical condition. They were found in an automobile on a little-travelled road more than three days after they had left their home in Providence.

Russell was dead when they were found. There was a bullet wound in his head and his skull had been crushed.

The girl was unconscious in the automobile beside him. She had been beaten and assaulted, it appeared. She was suffering from exposure.

The couple left home Wednesday evening for an automobile ride. It was thought they might have eloped but their prolonged absence caused alarm and a search was instituted. They were found near the old fair grounds at Providence.

Whether they were kidnaped and held by the attackers and later released was undetermined. Russell apparently had been robbed.

Officers found scraps of paper and envelopes near the car which were considered pertinent to the identity of the attackers.

FACING CHARGES OF DEPORTATION

Argyle, Minn., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Facing deportation charges, Dr. Joseph U. Joffrian, a former practitioner of medicine here, is held for federal authorities in the counyt jail at Duluth.

Joffrian applied for admission to the United States from Canada, but failed, the government alleges, to inform them of his conviction in a Montreal court in 1908 of gross indecency charges, for which he was given a 15 year prison term.

Following his parole in 1917, Joffrian has made several attempts to enter the United States and establish himself as a physician. He practiced his profession here in 1923.

SCHLEE AND BROCK LEAVE CROYDON FOR MUNICH, GERMANY

WEATHER EXCELLENT, PLANE IN PERFECT CONDITION, FLIERS REFRESHED

Munich, Germany, Aug. 29.—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee arrived at 4 P. M. from London, England, today at the end of the second leg of their round the world flight in the monoplane Pride of Detroit.

By C. P. WILLIAMSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Croydon Field, Eng., Aug. 29. — The around-the-world flight of Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock was resumed at 8:29 A. M. (3:29 A. M. EDT) today when they took off in their Stinson monoplane Pride of Detroit, for Munich, Germany, 570 miles away.

The weather was excellent, the plane in perfect condition, and the fliers refreshed after a night's sleep at the Hotel Savoy.

They had remained in London 22 hours, after their 2,350 mile flight across the Atlantic from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where at 6:40 A. M. (EDT) Saturday the two Americans started on a 22,067-mile flight around the world which they expect to accomplish in 15 days.

Schlee and Brock expected to arrive at Munich during the early afternoon and there were a possibility that they might take off after a short stop for Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, hoping to arrive there before dark tonight.

There was an immense crowd at the flying field, despite the early hour, to witness the start.

The tanks were not filled to full capacity, the aviators believing they would have sufficient fuel to reach their destination without crowding the plane with added weight.

The take-off was perfect, the big monoplane lifting into the air smoothly after a comparatively short run. It immediately was headed straight eastward.

The fliers carried cheese and chicken sandwiches and vacuum bottles of coffee, stored in the cockpit.

The plane is much the same as Lindbergh's machine in type. It has a 46 foot wing spread and is 32 feet long. Loaded, including the two fliers, it weighed 4,750 pounds.

Shortly before the take-off mechanics at the field examined the Pride of Detroit and found it in perfect condition.

"There wasn't a single splash of oil in the fuselage," they said, which was considered remarkable in view of the 2,350 mile flight across the Atlantic from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

Orders had been left at the field to have the plane fuelled by 7 A. M., or shortly after. At the hotel the fliers had asked to be awakened at 6:30 A. M.

At 7:05 A. M., mechanics hauled the Pride of Detroit out of its hangar.

Less than 45 hours after they departed from Newfoundland, Schlee and Brock were off on the second leg of their history-making flight.

They had crossed the Atlantic in 22 hours and 52 minutes, averaging slightly more than 100 miles an hour for the 2,350 miles from Harbor Grace, and ahead of them until they reached Hong Kong were a series of comparatively short jumps across Europe and Asia.

It was until after Schlee and Brock told of losing their bearings over the Irish sea and of flying for three hours along the coast of south-

OLD PROSPECTOR HITS WEALTH IN THE DESERT

NOW ABLE TO REPAY MRS. BRESNIHAN, GRUBSTAKING HIM

TONOPAH LADY HAS BEEN REAL ANGEL TO OLD AL KURRIS

Tonopah, Nev., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Old Al Kurris, as he is known in these parts, believed today he soon would be in a position to repay a certain debt to Mrs. Bresnihan, who for the past 20 years has grubstaked prospectors.

Plodding through the desert wastes for years has finally brought what is believed a rich strike to old Al. Samples of ore he brought here from his location a mile west of the famous Ben Hur mine assay $50,000 to the ton.

Friend to those stricken with the gold fever, Mrs. Bresnihan staked old Al numberless times to a burrow, pick and shovel and bacon and coffee with the understanding that she was his "pardner"—strike or no strike. Other similar "partnerships" have netted Mrs. Bresnihan several thousand dollars, it was said.

Once she nursed an old prospector through sickness and he staked several claims for her.

Flocking to this section since word of the new discovery spread, people in all manner of conveyances crowded the roads today. Visitors to the new discovery sites declare it is fully as rich as reported.

"We shore hope old Al's hit it this time," folks around here repeat. "It's another chance for him to pay back Mrs. Bresnihan."

Old timers here couldn't remember when old Al wasn't prospecting. With hard luck trailing him, he's been at it for years and years, they said.

Selection of a jury in the trial of Driscoll and Hanley was to start immediately. Shea will stand trial following disposal of their cases.

TO TEST POWERS OF "BIG 3" IN APPOINTMENTS

BOARD DEMANDS SALARY OF LIVESTOCK QUARANTINE SUPT. BE PAID

COMMISSION OF ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE REFUSES LESTER TATE CLAIM

St. Pau, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Prospects of a court battle between the state livestock sanitary board and Governor Theodore Christianson and the "Big Three" to test the dictatorial powers of the latter in appointments by the board were increased today.

The board demanded that the salary of Lester Tate for the last half of August as livestock quarantine superintendent be paid. The demand was made upon Ray P. Chase, state auditor, and Julius A. Schmahl, state treasurer.

The commissioner of administration and finance has already refused to allow the claim.

Members of the board have professed their intention of taking the case to court, asking that the state treasurer, state auditor and the "Big Three" be directed to pay the salary.

Contemplated court action would culminate recent disputes between the governor and the board over the appointment of a quarantine officer.

The question would be raised in the suit as to the constitutionality of the act creating the "Big Three." The board would contend that the state auditor is the only person empowered to audit claims against the state.

'GASTRIC POISONING' NEARLY CLAIMED LIFE OF ACTRESS

Hallywood, Calif., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Vera Reynolds, screen actress, today prepared to leave the hospital where she received treatment for mysterious "gastric poisoning," which almost cost her life.

Although police reported Miss Reynolds had attempted suicide, she vehemently denied it.

With the actress, her mother, Mrs. Lillie Reynolds, her physician and various press representatives declared she suffered from food poisoning and not from a deliberate attempt to end her life.

The actress was taken to the hospital in an ambulance Sunday night when physicians said her condition was extremely critical.

She was admitted under the name of Montgomery and she was not identified otherwise for several hours.

She was divorced several years ago from Earl Montgomery, one time noted screen comedian.

Hospital ambulance drivers first reported the case as "attempted suicide."

Miss Reynolds, according to Investigating Officers C. A. Dickey and S. A. Cowart made an attempt to end her life by taking poison.

At the hospital when she was revived the actress admitted she had been "drinking heavily" but denied that she had attempted suicide. Poor health and the strain of working from 14 to 16 hours daily at the De Mille studio on a current picture was the reason for her drinking, she said.

Officers of the ambulance squad reported they smelled poison in the bath room where the actress was found and even on the breath of the woman and that there were two unexplained burns on her chin. Dr. F. G. Nelson, however, declared the contents of Miss Reynolds' stomach revealed nothing more poisonous than bad liquor.

Mrs. Reynolds expressed the opinion that the actress had taken the wrong medicine by mistake.

VANDAL ENTERS CHURCH; DOES $2,000 DAMAGE

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Police today sought a vandal who entered Tyler Place Presbyterian church here and willfully damaged new decorations valued at $2,000.

After learning there had been no labor trouble in connection with redecoration work going on in the church, police decided the despoiler, who did his work sometime before the services yesterday, must have been a Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer.

An oily fluid was thrown on paneling, seats and on newly decorated walls. Whether the damage will prove greater than was first believed will not be known until chemists have finished examining the mixture scattered by the vandal.

FINAL TRIBUTE WAS PAID TO SACCO, VANZETTI

BOSTON SYMPATHIZERS STAGE "DEATH MARCH" BEFITTING A KING

DEFENSE COMMITTEE RECEIVES ASHES TO SEND TO NEW YORK

By HENRY MINOTT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Boston, Aug. 29.—Boston sympathizers today had paid final tribute to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

The defense committee this morning was to receive the ashes of the executed anarchists for shipment to New York and later to several European capitals, where new honors will be given the two men who died in the electric chair early last week as convicted murderers.

More than a dozen persons were slightly hurt here yesterday when several thousand mourners tramped through the streets in a pouring rain in a strange funeral procession.

Lining the curbs, many more thousands of spectators braved rain and cold to witness an extraordinary "death march" befitting a king.

Twice as the procession moved over the six mile route from the north end to Forest Hills crematory, police clashed with the mourners. Of the thousands in line at the start, not more than 150 reached the cemetery.

Mounted state troopers charged and dispersed a crowd at Scollay Square. The second clash occurred at Forest Hills Square, where more than a dozen persons, including a policeman, sustained minor injuries.

At the head of the procession, close to the twin hearses, was a limousine carrying Mrs. Rose Sacco, widow of Sacco, her 14-year-old son Dante, and Miss Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Vanzetti.

With a fresh locomotive and club car and the six Pullmans which were not derailed, the train left for New York at 7:09 A. M. It was rerouted over the New Portage branch.

Before it left it was definitely ascertained that none of the passengers was sufficiently injured to necessitate hospital treatment.

TO TEST POWERS OF "BIG 3" IN APPOINTMENTS

BOARD DEMANDS SALARY OF LIVESTOCK QUARANTINE SUPT. BE PAID

COMMISSION OF ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE REFUSES LESTER TATE CLAIM

St. Pau, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Prospects of a court battle between the state livestock sanitary board and Governor Theodore Christianson and the "Big Three" to test the dictatorial powers of the latter in appointments by the board were increased today.

The board demanded that the salary of Lester Tate for the last half of August as livestock quarantine superintendent be paid. The demand was made upon Ray P. Chase, state auditor, and Julius A. Schmahl, state treasurer.

The commissioner of administration and finance has already refused to allow the claim.

Members of the board have professed their intention of taking the case to court, asking that the state treasurer, state auditor and the "Big Three" be directed to pay the salary.

Contemplated court action would culminate recent disputes between the governor and the board over the appointment of a quarantine officer.

The question would be raised in the suit as to the constitutionality of the act creating the "Big Three." The board would contend that the state auditor is the only person empowered to audit claims against the state.

'GASTRIC POISONING' NEARLY CLAIMED LIFE OF ACTRESS

Hallywood, Calif., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Vera Reynolds, screen actress, today prepared to leave the hospital where she received treatment for mysterious "gastric poisoning," which almost cost her life.

Although police reported Miss Reynolds had attempted suicide, she vehemently denied it.

With the actress, her mother, Mrs. Lillie Reynolds, her physician and various press representatives declared she suffered from food poisoning and not from a deliberate attempt to end her life.

The actress was taken to the hospital in an ambulance Sunday night when physicians said her condition was extremely critical.

She was admitted under the name of Montgomery and she was not identified otherwise for several hours.

She was divorced several years ago from Earl Montgomery, one time noted screen comedian.

Hospital ambulance drivers first reported the case as "attempted suicide."

Miss Reynolds, according to Investigating Officers C. A. Dickey and S. A. Cowart made an attempt to end her life by taking poison.

At the hospital when she was revived the actress admitted she had been "drinking heavily" but denied that she had attempted suicide. Poor health and the strain of working from 14 to 16 hours daily at the De Mille studio on a current picture was the reason for her drinking, she said.

Officers of the ambulance squad reported they smelled poison in the bath room where the actress was found and even on the breath of the woman and that there were two unexplained burns on her chin. Dr. F. G. Nelson, however, declared the contents of Miss Reynolds' stomach revealed nothing more poisonous than bad liquor.

Mrs. Reynolds expressed the opinion that the actress had taken the wrong medicine by mistake.

VANDAL ENTERS CHURCH; DOES $2,000 DAMAGE

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Police today sought a vandal who entered Tyler Place Presbyterian church here and willfully damaged new decorations valued at $2,000.

After learning there had been no labor trouble in connection with redecoration work going on in the church, police decided the despoiler, who did his work sometime before the services yesterday, must have been a Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer.

An oily fluid was thrown on paneling, seats and on newly decorated walls. Whether the damage will prove greater than was first believed will not be known until chemists have finished examining the mixture scattered by the vandal.

FINAL TRIBUTE WAS PAID TO SACCO, VANZETTI

BOSTON SYMPATHIZERS STAGE "DEATH MARCH" BEFITTING A KING

DEFENSE COMMITTEE RECEIVES ASHES TO SEND TO NEW YORK

By HENRY MINOTT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Boston, Aug. 29.—Boston sympathizers today had paid final tribute to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

The defense committee this morning was to receive the ashes of the executed anarchists for shipment to New York and later to several European capitals, where new honors will be given the two men who died in the electric chair early last week as convicted murderers.

More than a dozen persons were slightly hurt here yesterday when several thousand mourners tramped through the streets in a pouring rain in a strange funeral procession.

Lining the curbs, many more thousands of spectators braved rain and cold to witness an extraordinary "death march" befitting a king.

Twice as the procession moved over the six mile route from the north end to Forest Hills crematory, police clashed with the mourners. Of the thousands in line at the start, not more than 150 reached the cemetery.

Mounted state troopers charged and dispersed a crowd at Scollay Square. The second clash occurred at Forest Hills Square, where more than a dozen persons, including a policeman, sustained minor injuries.

At the head of the procession, close to the twin hearses, was a limousine carrying Mrs. Rose Sacco, widow of Sacco, her 14-year-old son Dante, and Miss Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Vanzetti.

DRAGGED DOWN OTHER ENGINE NEAR BENNINGTON

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Climbing a grade on the Allegheny mountains at Bennington, 14 miles west of Altoona, today the Broadway Limited, crack flyer of the Pennsylvania railroad was derailed, resulting in the death of both members of the crew of the first engine. Several persons were injured.

The train, a double-header, was travelling at the rate of about 35 miles an hour when the accident occurred at 3:32 A. M., daylight time.

The lead engine jumped the track, toppled over and dragged the second engine with it. Three of the sleeping cars were also thrown off the track and tilted against the bank.

Passengers in all nine Pullman cars were severely shaken and many were cut and bruised.

The train was bound from Chicago to New York at the time of the derailment.

The known injured:

Edward Hunter, Crafton, Pa., engineer on No. 2 engine.

E. F. Hartman, Conemangh, Pa., fireman on No. 2 engine.

E. J. Sutton, New York, baggage master

J. W. Simpson, Manor, Pa., conductor.

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 29—The Broadway Limited, eastbound, was derailed at Bennington, 14 miles west of here early today. The engine and five coaches turned over. Two bodies were removed from the wreckage.

Nine persons, including the engineer and fireman, were reported seriously injured and taken to the Altoona hospital.

Two relief trains were sent to the scene of the accident.

The Broadway Limited is a Pennsylvania Express train.

The dead:

C. L. Garrett, engineer on the lead engine.

R. C. Spangler, of Derry, Pa., fireman on the lead engine

The train, pulled by two engines, ploughed off the track while traveling at the rate of about 35 miles an hour, railroad officials reported.

A relief train, with full first-aid equipment, was dispatched from Pittsburgh at 4 A. M., to the scene of the wreck.

With a fresh locomotive and club car and the six Pullmans which were not derailed, the train left for New York at 7:09 A. M. It was rerouted over the New Portage branch.

Before it left it was definitely ascertained that none of the passengers was sufficiently injured to necessitate hospital treatment.

Dileski was taken several miles from the field where he was attacked, and thrown alongside the road. The theft of a quantity of liquor at a picnic is believed to have caused the attack on Dileski.

UNSEASONABLE WEATHER ON THE ATLANTIC COAST

New York, Aug. 29.—(UP)—New York and the eastern seaboard were visited again today by unseasonable weather without precedent in almost 30 years.

Weatherbound resorts and steamship companies lost half a million dollars over the week-end. Concessionaries at Coney Island, Long Beach, the Rockaways, and Atlantic Highlands suffered heavily as their expected visitors stayed at home and begged janitors for heat.

RUSSELL CLAN HOLDS OUTING

Association of Descendants of Robert and Agnes Lietch Russell

PICNIC AT CAUGHEY FARM

Family Geneology Compiled, Officers Elected, Interest Growing

The Association of the Descendants of Robert and Agnes Lietch Russell held their annual picnic and reunion at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Preston Caughey on Sunday, Aug. 28.

The clan comprises the descendants of one Robert Russell who emigrated to this country from Ruthergien, a village near Glasgow, Scotland, in 1848.

He made his way up the Mississippi as far as old Crow Wing, and obtained employment in perhaps the first lumber camp ever established in these parts. Later he worked on the government buildings at Fort Ripley when they were being constructed.

When the family arrived in 1851 after a six weeks ocean voyage they located for a time at Sauk Rapids and finally filed on a homestead near the mouth of Platte river in the northwest corner of Benton county.

In 1860 he joined a caravan trailing across the plains to Pikes Peak during the gold rush. He and his partner staked out a mining claim there and worked it with good prospects of success until 1862, when he was killed by a cave-in of the shaft.

This left the widow in destitute circumstances with a family of eight children, the oldest eighteen and the youngest a babe in arms, born after his fathers departure. This son, John H. Russell, is now a resident of Little Falls.

But from these small beginnings has grown a vigorous family tree, and on its trunk have been grafted many branches. Some five years ago a family geneology was compiled and published, and one of the aims of the present organization is to keep up the record from year to year, while the facts may be obtained. At the present time it numbers several hundred names.

Those in the Brainerd territory who are members of the clan are Mrs. Marion Caughey and family, and the family of Wallace Smart.

Besides several visitors, seventy-seven members were present at the picnic, some having come from distances as far away as Farmers City, Ill., Minneapolis and St. Paul, Castle Rock, Wash., Fargo and Windsor, N. D., and Worley, Idaho.

O. T. Trace, former superintendent of Benton county schools, was elected president; J. H. Russell and Walter P. Caughey, first and second vice-presidents; Mrs. A. H. Gates, of Rice secretary-treasurer, and Miss Alma Caughey, historian.

Besides being the annual reunion of the clan, the occasion was the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birthday of O. T. Trace, one of the senior members, and the recognition of his birthday added to the activities of the day. This is the seventh annual picnic held, and the interest grows each year.

BOWLING ALLEYS OPEN TO PUBLIC AT ELKS HOME

HIGH SCORES FEATURE WEEK-END OPENING OF FOUR FINE ALLEYS

C. C. VAN ESSEN CHALKS UP THE HIGH SCORES FOR SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

High scores have been recorded at the new Elks Home bowling alleys over the week-end during which time the alleys were officially opened to the public.

C. C. Van Essen came through with a 219 count on Saturday and took the cash prize for the day. Not satisfied with a 199 score hung up by Oscar A. Nelson, Van returned to the alleys Sunday evening, and, after a few warming up games, put up a count of 202, again copping the cash prize for Sunday. Ziebell and Buss also had nice counts for both days.

A handicap league will be formed at a meeting to be held next Wednesday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the alleys.

Team entries can be made with Mr. Block at the alleys at any time but it is urged that everyone interested should be on hand for the meeting which will be held following the baseball game.

The bowling alleys are for the benefit of the public and anyone desiring to bowl can do so. It is not restricted to members of the Elks club.

LEVINE FLIES PLANE, PARIS TO ENGLAND

ATTEMPTS TO ALIGHT VERY AMATEURISH AND AMBULANCE SUMMONED

NOW SAYS HE WILL FLY ALONE IN MONOPLANE BACK TO NEW YORK CITY

By KEITH JONES

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Croydon Airport, Eng., Aug. 29.—Charles A. Levine, after flying here from Paris alone today, announced his intention to fly to New York alone, in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia at the earliest possible moment. The exact time is dependent, he said, upon the weather.

Levine revealed his plan during a general press interview granted an hour and a half after he arrived here. Levine's attempts to alight at Croydon were so obviously the efforts of an amateur that an ambulance and a physician were summoned to the field to attend him in the event of injury.

The American flier alighted without injury to himself, however, and immediately secluded himself in a hangar with his plane. It was said at first that he would remain at the airport all night and that he would refuse to receive newspapermen, but he relented.

An attendant asked Levine how he had enjoyed his journey.

"Oh, pretty well," Levine replied.

Air Mindedness

From the beginning the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has given faith and support to the cause of aviation.

It was among the first to develop a satisfactory fuel and lubricant for aviation use and it supplies the major part of the demand today. It is among the first industrial concerns to own a company airplane.

This Company identified itself promptly with the pioneers of the air because it held a vision of the "flying age" now begun and believed that by aiding in the development of aviation it might broaden its service and increase its usefulness to the people of the Middle West.

The American public has a part to play in the development of aviation. It must become "air-minded."

No more is thought of flying in the Eastern Hemisphere than is thought here of travel by train or motor. The whole world is traveling by air. The Germans, the British, the French and the Italians have all opened regular air service ranging from the cities of Europe as far away as Africa and Asia.

America, having given the airplane to the world and perfected it to its present degree of reliability should be at the front in the development of popular air travel. America must keep step with its inventors and its aviators.

We are living in stirring times. The whole world has thrilled to the exploits of winged pioneers this year. World records have been broken—new trails blazed—by daring heroes of the air. American manhood and American machines have written a proud chapter in aviation history.

These recent glorious deeds fire the imagination and their real meaning is worthy of thought. Aviation is more than a thrilling sport. It is a new and relatively safe means of transportation.

Public confidence is needed to stimulate the development of commercial aviation. Certain facts in our aviation history should help us to become "air-minded."

Last year there were only two fatal accidents in the air mail service. That means one casualty to each 1,288,000 miles flown!

Colonel Lindbergh has traveled the equivalent of eight times around the earth without an accident. In his signed story in the New York Times he said, "I have made 7,190 flights, totaling 1,823 hours and 40 minutes on a conservative estimate. Last year I flew 763 hours. In all, I have carried 5,951 passengers and I am glad to say I have never had an accident, either to them or to myself."

Business men are becoming convinced that the risk has been taken out of aviation. Air-mail is used with no more question of its efficiency than of older forms of postal service.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes in the future of aviation and desires to further the cause. By giving publicity to these facts it hopes to help bring about the realization that transportation in the air—as on the land—is relatively safe, to aid in the development of the "air-mindedness" essential to progress in this flying age.

Husband (anxiously) — My wife seems not to have the slightest interest in life.

Doctor—What makes you think that?

Husband—Well, I've tried her with golf, billiards, football and racing, and it's just like talking to a stone.

Weary Bill

Collector—Your account has been running for a long time, Mr. Jones.

Mr. Jones—Exactly, sir. It must be very tired. Let's just let it lie for a while.—Answers.

Her Fault

Wife—Doesn't your conscience hurt you for telling these lies?

Hubby—Why should it? You don't believe me.

Not Only That

Burglar—I beg your pardon, sir, but I mistook your house for mine.

Owner—Yes, and I should say you've done the same with my goods.

Her Own Fault

It is said there never was a woman philosopher. The saying got a start, probably, because women believe all the gallant things men say about them; in all the idealism they read about. Men are philosophers because they discount such things as idealism, gallantry, patriotism; it was a man who said patriotism is the first resort of a scoundrel. — E. W. Howe's Monthly.

BOWLING ALLEYS OPEN TO PUBLIC AT ELKS HOME

HIGH SCORES FEATURE WEEK-END OPENING OF FOUR FINE ALLEYS

C. C. VAN ESSEN CHALKS UP THE HIGH SCORES FOR SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

High scores have been recorded at the new Elks Home bowling alleys over the week-end during which time the alleys were officially opened to the public.

C. C. Van Essen came through with a 219 count on Saturday and took the cash prize for the day. Not satisfied with a 199 score hung up by Oscar A. Nelson, Van returned to the alleys Sunday evening, and, after a few warming up games, put up a count of 202, again copping the cash prize for Sunday. Ziebell and Buss also had nice counts for both days.

A handicap league will be formed at a meeting to be held next Wednesday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the alleys.

Team entries can be made with Mr. Block at the alleys at any time but it is urged that everyone interested should be on hand for the meeting which will be held following the baseball game.

The bowling alleys are for the benefit of the public and anyone desiring to bowl can do so. It is not restricted to members of the Elks club.

LEVINE FLIES PLANE, PARIS TO ENGLAND

ATTEMPTS TO ALIGHT VERY AMATEURISH AND AMBULANCE SUMMONED

NOW SAYS HE WILL FLY ALONE IN MONOPLANE BACK TO NEW YORK CITY

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Croydon Airport, Eng., Aug. 29.—Charles A. Levine, after flying here from Paris alone today, announced his intention to fly to New York alone, in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia at the earliest possible moment. The exact time is dependent, he said, upon the weather.

Levine revealed his plan during a general press interview granted an hour and a half after he arrived here. Levine's attempts to alight at Croydon were so obviously the efforts of an amateur that an ambulance and a physician were summoned to the field to attend him in the event of injury.

The American flier alighted without injury to himself, however, and immediately secluded himself in a hangar with his plane. It was said at first that he would remain at the airport all night and that he would refuse to receive newspapermen, but he relented.

An attendant asked Levine how he had enjoyed his journey.

"Oh, pretty well," Levine replied.

Air Mindedness

From the beginning the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has given faith and support to the cause of aviation.

It was among the first to develop a satisfactory fuel and lubricant for aviation use and it supplies the major part of the demand today. It is among the first industrial concerns to own a company airplane.

This Company identified itself promptly with the pioneers of the air because it held a vision of the "flying age" now begun and believed that by aiding in the development of aviation it might broaden its service and increase its usefulness to the people of the Middle West.

The American public has a part to play in the development of aviation. It must become "air-minded."

No more is thought of flying in the Eastern Hemisphere than is thought here of travel by train or motor. The whole world is traveling by air. The Germans, the British, the French and the Italians have all opened regular air service ranging from the cities of Europe as far away as Africa and Asia.

America, having given the airplane to the world and perfected it to its present degree of reliability should be at the front in the development of popular air travel. America must keep step with its inventors and its aviators.

We are living in stirring times. The whole world has thrilled to the exploits of winged pioneers this year. World records have been broken—new trails blazed—by daring heroes of the air. American manhood and American machines have written a proud chapter in aviation history.

These recent glorious deeds fire the imagination and their real meaning is worthy of thought. Aviation is more than a thrilling sport. It is a new and relatively safe means of transportation.

Public confidence is needed to stimulate the development of commercial aviation. Certain facts in our aviation history should help us to become "air-minded."

Last year there were only two fatal accidents in the air mail service. That means one casualty to each 1,288,000 miles flown!

Colonel Lindbergh has traveled the equivalent of eight times around the earth without an accident. In his signed story in the New York Times he said, "I have made 7,190 flights, totaling 1,823 hours and 40 minutes on a conservative estimate. Last year I flew 763 hours. In all, I have carried 5,951 passengers and I am glad to say I have never had an accident, either to them or to myself."

Business men are becoming convinced that the risk has been taken out of aviation. Air-mail is used with no more question of its efficiency than of older forms of postal service.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes in the future of aviation and desires to further the cause. By giving publicity to these facts it hopes to help bring about the realization that transportation in the air—as on the land—is relatively safe, to aid in the development of the "air-mindedness" essential to progress in this flying age.

GRANDMA'S PRETTY ANKLES

THE flappers are not having things all their own way. Flapper ankles are not the most perfect in the world. The irreverence of the younger generation for the sentimentalities of its elders is bringing its own retribution. As reported in the New York Herald Tribune, a grandmother, nearing 60, has taken first prize for the best pair of ankles among the summer visitors to Penobscott bay, Maine.

In other words, grandma is finding out that as an institution in cap and shawl she no longer commands the same respect and attention as of yore, so she is swapping her spectacles for silk hose, she is abandoning her rocker to fare forth and beat the flappers at their own game. They would do well to look to their laurels.

It is on the whole a good sign. The old ladies of yesteryear had their great merits, among them a dignity that we miss in this period of transition. But the convention that they must look their age tempted some to settle back on their oars too early to vegetate and confine their activity to their tongues. It was bad for them, and one may doubt seriously whether it was an altogether wholesome thing for those who revered and pampered them. There is nothing in age alone that deserves obeisance.

The convention itself was probably a holdover from the day when women as farm wives, worked too hard, bore too many children, had too much responsibility and wore out rapidly. Then they had to be retired to the chimney corner to make way for daughters or daughters-in-law whose young shoulders could better bear the burden. But that day vanished for the average woman when our civilization switched from a purely agricultural to an industrial basis. Now, with fewer children, lighter work, less responsibility and more wealth, there is little reason why she should say good-bye to her physical attractions and pass over into the "dear old lady" class for at least 20 years beyond her former dead line.

As a matter of fact, our machines that are lifting the dead weight of grinding toil from human shoulders are not only abolishing our old rigid economic classifications, but our old rigid age classifications as well. We shall hear more of grandma's ankles.

ON TO SCHOOL

WITH summer vacations drawing to a close, pupils of our schools and their parents should turn their minds to the important business of continuing youth's education.

The recent flight of Lindbergh is an inspiring example of seeing the task through. Just as Lindy turned his plane East and set out for Paris, so must the student turn his thoughts toward our educational institutions with the determination, "On to School."

We should employ as much determination, zeal and thoroughness in continuing this great adventure as Lindy did in his flight to France. The happy partnership of Lindy and his plane, which he termed "we," finds parallel in our partnership with our schools. We should unite the spirit of youth with the spirit of education, just as Lindy joined the Spirit of America" with the "Spirit of St. Louis."

Lindbergh did not make his trip primarily for gain but for accomplishment. However, the former proved a valuable by-product. Let us follow his example, and, as he did, continue our flight in education for the good of the nation and the cause of progress, as well as for the returns to youth. Though the impulse is unselfish its fruits are substantial, for out of such enterprise springs the inspiration that generates creative power. A hundred plans in aviation are maturing because of Lindy's single achievement. A thousand advantages accrue from the achievements of education.

Pupil no less than aviator must follow through to attain success. Lindy did not stop with the acclaim of the world ringing in his ears. He had just begun his start on a constructive career. He had finished but one lap of the race. The same application can be made to commencement and promotion in our schools; these are but steps to a higher service.

Parents are reminded that Lindbergh's backers had no guarantee of any returns. Loyalty and admiration for the spirit of this youth and the cause he championed inspired them to make the necessary sacrifices. This should be the attitude of parents and taxpayers who appreciate that education is the foundation for life.

It is timely, then, right now, when school days are just ahead, to turn our eyes toward our schools, also toward our boys and girls called on for an important decision, and sound the slogan, "On to School."—Staples World.

FARMER IS INDEPENDENT

THERE is so much pessimistic stuff written about farmers by people who know little about it or are trying to gain favor by such attitude, that it is refreshing to have the Clear Lake Times refer to its as "all bunk," and then voices this bit of appreciation to this most useful vocation:

"The genuine farmer—who has chosen the business for a livelihood—is one of the most independent of men on God's green earth. He may not get a pay envelope every Saturday night but then he doesn't wake up some morning and find himself out of a job, or laid off indefinitely on account of a business depression; or called out on a strike at the behest of a walking delegate. He doesn't have to worry about where his next month's food supply is coming from—he's got it on hand. He may not get out to a 'movie' every night, but on Sunday he can take his family out in the Ford or Chevrolet and enjoy the beauties of nature and he's not afraid that the installment shark will be on hand the next day. He doesn't have to—his car is paid for.

John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barters her for gold to Ravoir, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoir; she escapes, and returns to the deserted lovenest, but Fabien has gone. Homeless, both roam Paris, looking for each other. Manon is seized by a rowdy.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Only a thin partition and a few feet of space separated Fabien from Manon and her tormentor. He even heard the man's coarse laugh and a girl's scream. He had never heard Manon scream and she was so terrified that there was no familiar ring in her voice, however; it was a call for help, and Fabien rose to his feet. Dazed from his first bout with brandy, he staggered crazily and the landlord forced him into a seat.

"What you want to butt in for?" he growled.

"A lady in distress—" explained Fabien feebly.

"Lady, is it—she come in here with him, didn't she?"

Fabien did not know. But on second thought he decided it did not matter. He could see several women, from where he sat, and they were all carousing noisily with their male companions. It seemed to be the usual thing. The spark of chivalry faded from Fabien's eyes and he reached for another drink! "God, I wish I could find Manon!" His head went down on his arms and he cried, real tears from exhaustion and worry.

By this time Manon's strength was gone.

* * * * *

Manon's efforts to free herself were futile and brought forth shouts of enjoyment from the big bully. His women were always willing, for his caresses, to the point of annoyance. This was the first time he had had to argue with one and the conquest was promising.

"Come on, beauty, it's time for a kiss," he whispered hoarsely with his mouth very near to Manon's lips.

With all her might she pushed at his face with both hands and screamed. But this did not prevent his strong arms from circling her waist and drawing her close.

By this time Manon's strength was gone and sobs of fright and hysteria shook her whole body.

* * * * *

Up in the attic room when Lescaut had promised to keep an eye on his rebellious sister he was not making an idle threat. She was too valuable to become lost or stolen again. Thus it was that, unknown to Manon, Lescaut lurked in the shadows when she started out out alone from the pension and he followed at a safe distance. He wanted her to get a taste of being alone on the streets of Paris. According to his idea it would be the best thing in the world to put her in the proper state of receptiveness to his plans. But Lescaut had no idea of permitting Manon to become soiled by her contact with sordid reality—the Comte preferred her as she was, not as she might become if left on the loose without funds and a protector.

Lescaut saw Manon carried into the cafe, but he waited just long enough for her to appreciate his interference before making an appearance.

His entrance was most timely. Manon's strength had given way and the bully's loose lips were within an inch of her own when Lescaut roughly took him by the arm and spun him around. Surprised at this interference the man cursed loudly and made known his willingness to fight it out.

A fine of juggling gold Louis was forced into his fist as Lescaut explained, "I would appreciate your generosity in giving her up. She happens to be my sister and I must take her home."

Mollified by the gold and its promised pleasures the man relinquished his tempting prey.

Almost dead from fright, Manon clung to Lescaut for protection and support. It seemed that the experiences of the last few hours must have been a nightmare and, although Manon knew they were not, she could hardly wait to get out of that horrible cafe.

Realizing that she no longer made any resistance about going with him, Lescaut led her triumphantly through the center room toward the outside door.

They passed a man with his head buried on outstretched arms, but they did not look in his direction; if they had, Manon would have recognized Fabien. No explanations would have been necessary and she would have remained with him, even in that terrible place, rather than accompany Lescaut to the Comte's gorgeous mansion.

It seems strange and wrong that when two people loved as truly as Fabien and Manon that their lives should be wrecked and miserable as a result of their passion.

Fabien stayed at the lonely table until his dazed condition had been absorbed in sleep.

When he went out into the early morning his pockets were empty. But he was saved the anguish of knowing that Manon had been very near to him during the night and was by now, very much against her will, established as the Come De Ravoir's pampered mistress.

CHAPTER XI

Days and days of weary searching brought no trace of Manon.

It was impossible for Fabien to concentrate on anything until she had been found. He could not return to his father and hear Manon slandered, and he was in no mood to resume his studies. Love had so engulfed his mind and heart that he had surrendered himself to its resulting misery and declined every avenue of escape.

Tiberge was his one friend and support, without whose many voluntary loans Fabien would have starved. His courage was kept up only by the belief that Manon was true and trying as hard to find him as he was to locate her.

The passing weeks brought a change in his former neat appearance. His clothes grew shabby and he did not care. He knew that as soon as he found Manon his interest and ambition would be refired and he would enjoy the best life offered.

Tiberge never mentioned the call he made on Manon, yet he sensed that in some way it influenced her departure and as time passed and he saw how deeply and seriously Fabien was affected, he regretted the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

A desire to justify his own stand, and perhaps bring Fabien to his senses, made Tiberge begin a personal search for Manon.

He was successful in locating her. Discovering the kind of life she was leading gave him complete vindication in the matter. He was right about her being the wrong type of woman for Fabien. Tiberge hurried to relate the news because he was sure that Fabien's interest and anguish would cease when he knew the truth, then he would be willing to return to his father and his calling.

They were walking along the Boulevard together when Tiberge said, "Heartache is a bitter thing to endure alone. We who love you have a right to share it—come back!"

"I shall never leave Paris until I have found Manon," replied Fabien tonelessly.

Now was Tiberge's chance. "But Manon is lost to you. She has placed herself under the protection of the Comte De Ravoir." He carefully studied Fabien's face and felt sorry for him.

"Damm you! Do you think I believe that lie?" Fabien's eyes blazed and his fists were clenched.

"My friend—it is the truth! I want only to help you." Tiberge spoke soothingly but it was useless.

Fabien quickened his stride and left Tiberge behind as though he no longer desired his society. However, he had not gone more than a few paces when he stopped dead in his tracks and peered tragically into a carriage that was passing by.

It was a beautiful and expensive carriage, but he did not notice that. Neither was he conscious that his gaiters and clothes were being spattered with mud from the wheels. All he saw was—Manon! His beautiful Manon! Still beautiful—more lovely than when he last saw her—but no longer his! This was too evident from her luxurious attire and magnificent jewels.

GRANDMA'S PRETTY ANKLES

THE flappers are not having things all their own way. Flapper ankles are not the most perfect in the world. The irreverence of the younger generation for the sentimentalities of its elders is bringing its own retribution. As reported in the New York Herald Tribune, a grandmother, nearing 60, has taken first prize for the best pair of ankles among the summer visitors to Penobscott bay, Maine.

In other words, grandma is finding out that as an institution in cap and shawl she no longer commands the same respect and attention as of yore, so she is swapping her spectacles for silk hose, she is abandoning her rocker to fare forth and beat the flappers at their own game. They would do well to look to their laurels.

It is on the whole a good sign. The old ladies of yesteryear had their great merits, among them a dignity that we miss in this period of transition. But the convention that they must look their age tempted some to settle back on their oars too early to vegetate and confine their activity to their tongues. It was bad for them, and one may doubt seriously whether it was an altogether wholesome thing for those who revered and pampered them. There is nothing in age alone that deserves obeisance.

The convention itself was probably a holdover from the day when women as farm wives, worked too hard, bore too many children, had too much responsibility and wore out rapidly. Then they had to be retired to the chimney corner to make way for daughters or daughters-in-law whose young shoulders could better bear the burden. But that day vanished for the average woman when our civilization switched from a purely agricultural to an industrial basis. Now, with fewer children, lighter work, less responsibility and more wealth, there is little reason why she should say good-bye to her physical attractions and pass over into the "dear old lady" class for at least 20 years beyond her former dead line.

As a matter of fact, our machines that are lifting the dead weight of grinding toil from human shoulders are not only abolishing our old rigid economic classifications, but our old rigid age classifications as well. We shall hear more of grandma's ankles.

ON TO SCHOOL

WITH summer vacations drawing to a close, pupils of our schools and their parents should turn their minds to the important business of continuing youth's education.

The recent flight of Lindbergh is an inspiring example of seeing the task through. Just as Lindy turned his plane East and set out for Paris, so must the student turn his thoughts toward our educational institutions with the determination, "On to School."

We should employ as much determination, zeal and thoroughness in continuing this great adventure as Lindy did in his flight to France. The happy partnership of Lindy and his plane, which he termed "we," finds parallel in our partnership with our schools. We should unite the spirit of youth with the spirit of education, just as Lindy joined the Spirit of America" with the "Spirit of St. Louis."

Lindbergh did not make his trip primarily for gain but for accomplishment. However, the former proved a valuable by-product. Let us follow his example, and, as he did, continue our flight in education for the good of the nation and the cause of progress, as well as for the returns to youth. Though the impulse is unselfish its fruits are substantial, for out of such enterprise springs the inspiration that generates creative power. A hundred plans in aviation are maturing because of Lindy's single achievement. A thousand advantages accrue from the achievements of education.

Pupil no less than aviator must follow through to attain success. Lindy did not stop with the acclaim of the world ringing in his ears. He had just begun his start on a constructive career. He had finished but one lap of the race. The same application can be made to commencement and promotion in our schools; these are but steps to a higher service.

Parents are reminded that Lindbergh's backers had no guarantee of any returns. Loyalty and admiration for the spirit of this youth and the cause he championed inspired them to make the necessary sacrifices. This should be the attitude of parents and taxpayers who appreciate that education is the foundation for life.

It is timely, then, right now, when school days are just ahead, to turn our eyes toward our schools, also toward our boys and girls called on for an important decision, and sound the slogan, "On to School."—Staples World.

FARMER IS INDEPENDENT

THERE is so much pessimistic stuff written about farmers by people who know little about it or are trying to gain favor by such attitude, that it is refreshing to have the Clear Lake Times refer to its as "all bunk," and then voices this bit of appreciation to this most useful vocation:

"The genuine farmer—who has chosen the business for a livelihood—is one of the most independent of men on God's green earth. He may not get a pay envelope every Saturday night but then he doesn't wake up some morning and find himself out of a job, or laid off indefinitely on account of a business depression; or called out on a strike at the behest of a walking delegate. He doesn't have to worry about where his next month's food supply is coming from—he's got it on hand. He may not get out to a 'movie' every night, but on Sunday he can take his family out in the Ford or Chevrolet and enjoy the beauties of nature and he's not afraid that the installment shark will be on hand the next day. He doesn't have to—his car is paid for.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barters her for gold to Ravoir, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoir; she escapes, and returns to the deserted lovenest, but Fabien has gone. Homeless, both roam Paris, looking for each other. Manon is seized by a rowdy.

Only a thin partition and a few feet of space separated Fabien from Manon and her tormentor. He even heard the man's coarse laugh and a girl's scream. He had never heard Manon scream and she was so terrified that there was no familiar ring in her voice, however; it was a call for help, and Fabien rose to his feet. Dazed from his first bout with brandy, he staggered crazily and the landlord forced him into a seat.

"What you want to butt in for?" he growled.

"A lady in distress—" explained Fabien feebly.

"Lady, is?" eye—she come in here with him, didn't she?"

Fabien did not know. But on second thought he decided it did not matter. He could see several women, from where he sat, and they were all carousing noisily with their male companions. It seemed to be the usual thing. The spark of chivalry faded from Fabien's eyes and he reached for another drink! "God, I wish I could find Manon!" His head went down on his arms and he cried, real tears from exhaustion and worry.

By this time Manon's strength was gone.

* * * * *

Manon's efforts to free herself were futile and brought forth shouts of enjoyment from the big bully. His women were always willing, for his caresses, to the point of annoyance. This was the first time he had had to argue with one and the conquest was promising.

"Come on, beauty, it's time for a kiss," he whispered hoarsely with his mouth very near to Manon's lips.

With all her might she pushed at his face with both hands and screamed. But this did not prevent two strong arms from circling her waist and drawing her close.

By this time Manon's strength was gone and sobs of fright and hysteria shook her whole body.

* * * * *

Up in the attic room when Lescaut had promised to keep an eye on his rebellious sister he was not making an idle threat. She was too valuable to become lost or stolen again. Thus it was that, unknown to Manon, Lescaut lurked in the shadows when she started out out alone from the pension and he followed at a safe distance. He wanted her to get a taste of being alone on the streets of Paris. According to his idea it would be the best thing in the world to put her in the proper state of receptiveness to his plans. But Lescaut had no idea of permitting Manon to become soiled by her contact with sordid reality—the Comte preferred her as she was, not as she might become if left on the loose without funds and a protector.

Lescaut saw Manon carried into the cafe, but he waited just long enough for her to appreciate his interference before making an appearance.

His entrance was most timely. Manon's strength had given way and the bully's loose lips were within an inch of her own when Lescaut roughly took him by the arm and spun him around. Surprised at this interference the man cursed loudly and made known his willingness to fight it out.

A fair of jingling gold Louis was forced into his fist as Lescaut explained, "I would appreciate your generosity in giving her up. She happens to be my sister and I must take her home."

Mollified by the gold and its promised pleasures the man relinquished his tempting prey.

Almost dead from fright, Manon clung to Lescaut for protection and support. It seemed that the experiences of the last few hours must have been a nightmare and, although Manon knew they were not, she could hardly wait to get out of that horrible cafe.

Realizing that she no longer made any resistance about going with him, Lescaut led her triumphantly through the center room toward the outside door.

They passed a man with his head buried on outstretched arms, but they did not look in his direction; if they had, Manon would have recognized Fabien. No explanations would have been necessary and she would have remained with him, even in that terrible place, rather than accompany Lescaut to the Comte's gorgeous mansion.

It seems strange and wrong that when two people loved as truly as Fabien and Manon that their lives should be wrecked and miserable as a result of their passion.

Fabien stayed at the lonely table until his dazed condition had been absorbed in sleep.

When he went out into the early morning his pockets were empty. But he was saved the anguish of knowing that Manon had been very near to him during the night and was by now, very much against her will, established as the Come De Ravoir's pampered mistress.

CHAPTER XI

Days and days of weary searching brought no trace of Manon.

It was impossible for Fabien to concentrate on anything until she had been found. He could not return to his father and hear Manon slandered, and he was in no mood to resume his studies. Love had so engulfed his mind and heart that he had surrendered himself to its resulting misery and declined every avenue of escape.

Tiberge was his one friend and support, without whose many voluntary loans Fabien would have starved. His courage was kept up only by the belief that Manon was true and trying as hard to find him as he was to locate her.

The passing weeks brought a change in his former neat appearance. His clothes grew shabby and he did not care. He knew that as soon as he found Manon his interest and ambition would be refired and he would enjoy the best life offered.

Tiberge never mentioned the call he made on Manon, yet he sensed that in some way it influenced her departure and as time passed and he saw how deeply and seriously Fabien was affected, he regretted the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

A desire to justify his own stand, and perhaps bring Fabien to his senses, made Tiberge begin a personal search for Manon.

He was successful in locating her. Discovering the kind of life she was leading gave him complete vindication in the matter. He was right about her being the wrong type of woman for Fabien. Tiberge hurried to relate the news because he was sure that Fabien's interest and anguish would cease when he knew the truth, then he would be willing to return to his father and his calling.

They were walking along the Boulevard together when Tiberge said, "Heartache is a bitter thing to endure alone. We who love you have a right to share it—come back!"

"I shall never leave Paris until I have found Manon," replied Fabien tonelessly.

Now was Tiberge's chance. "But Manon is lost to you. She has placed herself under the protection of the Comte De Ravoir." He carefully studied Fabien's face and felt sorry for him.

"Damn you! Do you think I believe that lie?" Fabien's eyes blazed and his fists were clenched.

"My friend—it is the truth! I want only to help you." Tiberge spoke soothingly but it was useless.

Fabien quickened his stride and left Tiberge behind as though he no longer desired his society. However, he had not gone more than a few paces when he stopped dead in his tracks and peered tragically into a carriage that was passing by.

It was a beautiful and expensive carriage, but he did not notice that. Neither was he conscious that his gaiters and clothes were being spattered with mud from the wheels. All he saw was—Manon! His beautiful Manon! Still beautiful—more lovely than when he last saw her—but no longer his! This was too evident from her luxurious attire and magnificent jewels.

KANSAS CITY YOUTH WINS TOURISTS TOURNEY WITH 81

JACK COOPER, JR. WINS THREE PRIZES IN DAY'S EVENTS

THIRD ANNUAL TOURNEY AT BRAINERD COUNTRY CLUB YESTERDAY A SUCCESS

DRIVING AND PUTTING CONTESTS ENTERED INTO WITH ENTHUSIASM

The Brainerd Country club staged the second half of its Third Annual Tourists' Tournament yesterday with excellent weather, a fine attendance and some good scores. The tournament committee has arranged so many events this year that it was impossible to dodge conflicting attractions elsewhere.

Many of the tourists had gone to Minneapolis to see the National Amateur and did not get back in time for the local event, but nevertheless there were 18 golfers as guests of the club. Nine holes were played in the morning and then a "Golfers' Lunch" was served and nine more holes played in the afternoon, followed by driving and putting contests. The tourists were very appreciative of the efforts of the club in putting on this event and spoke very highly of the generosity of the local merchants in contributing the prizes.

Mrs. A. R. Ziegler won the ladies' tournament with a 64, the prize being a pair of ladies' golf gloves contributed by George F. Murphy.

The results of the men's tournament follow:

Jack Cocper, Jr., Kansas City, Mo. 81—mirror, Dan Whitney; W. Stuart, Okmulgee, Okla., 82—Indian, B. C. McNamara; H. R. Ziegler, Junction City, Mo., 83—flashlight, Taylor Sales Service; Jack Cooper Sr. Kansas City, Mo., 83—sweater, O'Brien Mercantile Co.; Verne F. Lisle, Clarendon, Ia., 84—smoking stand, Fitzsimmons & Son; Albert Schmidtke, Olnan, Ia., 86—flashlight, Electric Garage; Victor Dodge, Minneapolis, 86—thermos bottle, Gruenhagen Co.; Frank Rahme, Minneapolis, 86—fish pole, Louis Hostager, Fred Boon, Manhattan, Kans., 87—line, Brainerd Hardware Co.; L. S. Donnell, Minneapolis, 90 — candy, Fountain Inn; Edwin Lisle, Clarendon, Ia., 92—candy, Olympia Cafe; L. H. Coomos, Manhattan, Kans., 93 cheese, Brainerd Fruit Co.; C. B. Kimball, Fargo, N. D., 98—thermos jug, H. P. Dunn; Allan Johnson, Minneapolis, 104—candy, Princess Candy Kitchen; D. L. Addison, Minneapolis, 108—cushion, Gamble Auto Co.; Henry Rahme, Minneapolis, 127—socks, John Carlson & Son; D. L. Peters, Des Moines, Ia., 128—2 lbs. coffee, Kwality Grocery; H. L. Anderson, Kansas City, Mo., 129—olives, W. E. Brockway.

The driving contest resulted as follows:

Victor Dodge, Minneapolis, 235 yards, salt and pepper, E. S. Houghton; Jack Cooper, Jr., Kansas City, Mo., 225 yards, grape juice, Fidelity Store; D. L. Addison, Minneapolis, 200 yards, socks, J. F. Murphy Clothing Co.

The putting contest, a contest where a ball is placed on each corner of the green, the object being to see in how few strokes all four balls can be sunk, was won by H. R. Ziegler with a score of seven, taking two on one hole, three on one and two holes one each. When one realizes that two putts are figured for each green, one readily sees the class of putting Mr. Ziegler is capable of. There were five players tied with a score of eight, and each of the five had taken the regulation two strokes on each ball. The five then picked the hardest corner of the green to approach the cup from, the object this time being to see how close they could come to the cup in one stroke.

The results in the putting contest follow:

H. R. Ziegler, 7—coffee, Consumers Co.; W. Stuart, 8 — motor oil, Standard Oil Co.; Jack Cooper, Jr., 8—coffee, Consumers Co.; Fred Boon, 8—malt, Economy Fruit Store.

Jack Cooper, the young boy from Kansas City, was undoubtedly the star of the day. An 81 on the Brainerd course, for a player unfamiliar with it, is shooting golf. Jack got first place in the medal play, second in the driving contest and third in the putting. In addition to being a good golfer, Jack is a modest, unassuming lad, and won the hearts of the gallery.

The tournament committee, on behalf of the Country club, wants to express its sincere appreciation of the spirit in which the merchants contributed these prizes. Without these prizes, a tournament of this kind could not be held, and the Brainerd Country club, because it is still struggling, still needs the hearty co-operation of the business houses of the city who see in the Brainerd Country club another means of increasing the tourist traffic in the community. If the present splendid progress of the club continues, in a few years they will not need to solicit prizes.

The committee also extends its thanks to Mrs. M. E. Ryan and Mrs. H. C. Herzog who served the lunch.

REPORT TUNNEY HAVING STIFF SHOULDER

HAS HAD NO WORKOUT SINCE LAST THURSDAY

PARTIALLY BECAUSE OF WEATHER AND PARTIALLY BECAUSE OF SHOULDER

WEATHER CONDITIONS BAD AT SPECULATOR TRAINING CAMP

Speculator, N. Y., Aug. 29.—(UP)—The chief interest around Gene Tunney's training camp is the champion's slightly stiff right shoulder.

He hasn't had a workout since last Thursday, partially because of the weather and partially because of his shoulder.

"The fact that I have a lame shoulder has nothing to do with my vacation," Tunney said. However, it is thought that the champion is taking the injury to his shoulder more seriously than he would have the camp followers believe.

Cold mountain winds and a wet ring were the reasons given by Tunney for the postponement of his workout yesterday.

If weather conditions remain the same Tunney says he will postpone boxing indefinitely which means that he is likely to leave for Chicago Thursday or Friday.

PREPARING DEMPSEY FOR BIG BATTLE

Crete, Ill., Aug. 29.—(UP)—The process of preparing Jack Dempsey for his attempt to temper Gene Tunney's widely advertised egotism on Sept. 22 was fully under way today with all comers who possessed $1.10 entitled to witness a double attraction at the Dempsey camp.

They could not only see the man who may prove to be the greatest boxer in the world go through his paces, but they could observe his comely wife looking on, apparently enjoying the performance until the men in the ring got extraordinarily rough.

Estelle Taylor, the actress, otherwise Mrs. Jack Dempsey, sat on the top of the grand stand at Lincoln Field race track yesterday and watched her husband go through seven rounds of relatively hard boxing.

Miss Taylor was only recently recovered from an illness which kept her confined for several weeks and her nurse went to the training camp with her. Although Estelle turned away from the ring when Jack opened up a gash over the eye of Benny Kruger, the husky German, and both fighters became spattered with blood, she looked on and smiled when he battered a 200-pound Homewood, Ill., policeman unconscious.

The victim was Bill Marshall and his craving to show his ability to the former champion was satisfied in something under three minutes.

More than 1,500 other spectators saw the workout yesterday and seemed to be satisfied they obtained their dollar's worth.

Dempsey's sparring partners, with exception of Jack McCann of St. Paul, offered little difficulty, and whether perforce or voluntarily, Jack handled them slowly. Although he missed frequently with both hands, seeming to lack range as well as force, he was fast in covering and hard to hit.

MINNESOTA BASEBALL

Fairmont, Minn. Aug. 29.—(UP)—Albert Lea was eliminated from title-chances in the Southern Minnesota league here Sunday when the local team defeated the visitors, 8 to 7. Seeley, Albert Lea hurler, was wild and in addition to permitting 12 hits he was guilty of five wild throws.

St. James, Minn., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Sherburne went into a tie with Mankato for second-half honors in the Southern Minnesota league game today by defeating St. James here, 1 to 0. Carl Eng had the best of a hurling duel with Sundberg, local pitcher.

Owatonna, Minn., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Six errors by the Owatonna team helped Faribault gain a victory in the Southern Minnesota leayue game here Sunday by a score of 23 to 6. The local team batted out 26 hits.

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Mankato was defeated in Sunday's Southern Minnesota league game here by Armours of South St. Paul, 9 to 3. The local team committed six errors.

CLOSE RACE IN NATIONAL CONTINUING

NEW YORK-ST. LOUIS, CINCINNATI-BROOKLYN GAMES RAINED OUT

ALL OF THE AMERICAN LEAGUE TEAMS SEE ACTION, HOWEVER

(By United Press)

National League games between New York and St. Louis and Cincinnati and Brooklyn were "rained out," leaving the close race in the league unchanged as the other four members were not scheduled.

All of the American League teams saw action, however. The Tigers, who are fighting with the Athletics for second place, were unable to overcome their losing streak and the Philadelphians beat Detroit, 9 to 5. The Athletics got three runs in the first inning and the Tigers never endangered the lead.

The Senators were unable to make use of any of their six hits off Ted Blankenship and the result was a shutout and their 12th straight defeat. The White Sox won 4 to 0 by bunching four hits and taking advantage of two Washington errors in the seventh inning to score all of their runs.

The St. Louis Browns were as helpless in their game with the Yankees as they have been all season. The score was 10 to 6 in favor of the latter. Babe Ruth hit home run number 42 and Keonig of New York and Williams of St. Louis also had four-base hits.

Boston took a see-saw game from the Indians in the 11th inning, 6 to 5. The game was scoreless until the fourth when the Sox got three. Cleveland got three the next inning and one in the sixth. Boston took a one-run lead in their half of the eighth, but the Indians tied the score in the same inning and forced the contest to go overtime.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Blues retained a slight margin in the lead of the American Association dividing a double-header with Toledo as Milwaukee did the same with Columbus. Kansas City beat Toledo 9 to 1 in the first game, while the Mudhens scored five runs in the tenth to take the second game, 7 to 5.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Milwaukee and Columbus split a twin bill, the Brewers taking the first game 10 to 9 in the tenth inning and the Senators winning the nightcap, 8 to 5. Both games were marked by heavy hitting on the part of each team. The Brewers are now two percentage points behind Toledo in second place.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Leo Moon, Minneapolis southpaw, was charged with losing both games of a double-header with Indianapolis. The Indians won 9 to 6 and 6 to 4. Fifteen Millers played in the first game and seventeen in the second. Six homers were made in the first game.

St. Paul, Minn.—St. Paul used five runs in each game to take a two-ply victory over Louisville, winning 5-3 and 5-4. Louisville made fourteen hits in the first game but close fielding prevented scoring.

TENNIS IS BECOMING HEAD-LINER

STATEMENT IS FULL OF AMAZING TRUTH, SAYS MARY K. BROWNE

EVERY DAY REFERENCE TO OUR HELEN OR BIG AND LITTLE BILLS

By MARY K. BROWNE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1927, by United Press)

New York, Aug. 29.—"Tennis is certainly becoming a headliner," said one of the inmates of the Vanderbilt hotel, the rendezvous of the tennis squad. The statement is full of amazing truth.

Our best sports writers scarcely let a day pass without a few words about "our Helen or our big and little Bills." The pictures in the Sunday sports edition of our Davis Cup tennis team were larger than the big four of polo. The men, horses and all.

I am forced to admit that six pictures of Bobby Jones took the first prize, for importance. Six pictures of baseball players took second place. Tennis, the game that was once called "sissy," was third, with a display of the big four of the international polo team in fourth place.

Why has tennis become popular? Because it is an exciting, attractive, fairly obvious game to watch, with comfort. It is an inexpensive game to play. The contests are international in aspect and that catches the imagination of the public. The outcome of the matches are more of a mystery. The players are becoming more skillful. The women are doing their bit in promoting the popularity of the game. Tennis is becoming more strenuous.

"Second wind" is something fairly new in women's tennis. Mrs. Chapin got her second wind both in her match with Joan Fry and in her match with Mrs. Mallory. Apparently no one gets it unless he is competing to the limit of his strength and not until tennis developed into a battle royal have we thought much about second wind.

I have had it and I know the wonderful sensation of revivifying it brings. Why it happens is a physical mystery to me. I have heard football men talk of it casually. I first experienced it in a game of field hockey, after running like mad up and down the field as a forward, I thought that I could not go on. I had a pain in my side and I was hopelessly winded. I actually felt as though I might drop dead. Suddenly I felt the fresh air fill my lungs. The pain left my side. I was a new person, completely refreshed. My second wind lasted all through the game.

On my four months' tour with Suzanne Lenglen there were two occasions when I was conscious of getting my second wind.

Mrs. Chapin described her sensations to me just as I had found them. When Charlotte Chapin had exerted herself to the limit in gaining a lead of 5-2 in the deciding set against Mrs. Mallory, and Molla started to climb back, Charlotte said she was so exhausted she could not go on. But she knew she must. She played on her nerve until she thought she would drop. Then suddenly came her second wind at a moment when she needed it, a gift from the gods. A refreshed Charlotte went on to the greatest victory of her career.

KANSAS CITY YOUTH WINS TOURISTS TOURNEY WITH 81

JACK COOPER, JR. WINS THREE PRIZES IN DAY'S EVENTS

THIRD ANNUAL TOURNEY AT BRAINERD COUNTRY CLUB YESTERDAY A SUCCESS

DRIVING AND PUTTING CONTESTS ENTERED INTO WITH ENTHUSIASM

The Brainerd Country club staged the second half of its Third Annual Tourists' Tournament yesterday with excellent weather, a fine attendance and some good scores. The tournament committee has arranged so many events this year that it was impossible to dodge conflicting attractions elsewhere.

Many of the tourists had gone to Minneapolis to see the National Amateur and did not get back in time for the local event, but nevertheless there were 18 golfers as guests of the club. Nine holes were played in the morning and then a "Golfers' Lunch" was served and nine more holes played in the afternoon, followed by driving and putting contests. The tourists were very appreciative of the efforts of the club in putting on this event and spoke very highly of the generosity of the local merchants in contributing the prizes.

Mrs. A. R. Ziegler won the ladies' tournament with a 64, the prize being a pair of ladies' golf gloves contributed by George F. Murphy.

The results of the men's tournament follow:

Jack Cooper, Jr., Kansas City, Mo. 81—mirror, Dan Whitney; W. Stuart, Okmulgee, Okla., 82—Indian, B. C. McNamara; H. R. Ziegler, Junction City, Mo., 83—flashlight, Taylor Sales Service; Jack Cooper Sr. Kansas City, Mo., 83—sweater, O'Brien Mercantile Co.; Verne F. Lisle, Clarendon, Ia., 84—smoking stand, Fitzsimmons & Son; Albert Schmidtke, Olnan, Ia., 86—flashlight, Electric Garage; Victor Dodge, Minneapolis, 86—thermos bottle, Gruenhagen Co.; Frank Rahme, Minneapolis, 86—fish pole, Louis Hostager; Fred Boon, Manhattan, Kans., 87—line, Brainerd Hardware Co.; L. S. Donnell, Minneapolis, 90 — candy, Fountain Inn; Edwin Lisle, Clarendon, Ia., 92—candy, Olympia Cafe; L. H. Coomos, Manhattan, Kans., 93—cheese, Brainerd Fruit Co.; C. H. Kimball, Fargo, N. D., 98—thermos jug, H. P. Dunn; Allan Johnson, Minneapolis, 104—candy, Princess Candy Kitchen; D. L. Addison, Minneapolis, 108—cushion, Gamble Auto Co.; Henry Rahme, Minneapolis, 127—socks, John Carlson & Son; D. L. Peters, Des Moines, Ia., 128—2 lbs. coffee, Kwality Grocery; H. L. Anderson, Kansas City, Mo., 129—olives, W. E. Brockway.

The driving contest resulted as follows:

Victor Dodge, Minneapolis, 235 yards, salt and pepper, E. S. Houghton; Jack Cooper, Jr., Kansas City, Mo., 225 yards, grape juice, Fidelity Store; D. L. Addison, Minneapolis, 200 yards, socks, J. F. Murphy Clothing Co.

The putting contest, a contest where a ball is placed on each corner of the green, the object being to see in how few strokes all four balls can be sunk, was won by H. R. Ziegler with a score of seven, taking two on one hole, three on one and two holes one each. When one realizes that two putts are figured for each green, one readily sees the class of putting Mr. Ziegler is capable of. There were five players tied with a score of eight, and each of the five had taken the regulation two strokes on each ball. The five then picked the hardest corner of the green to approach the cup from, the object this time being to see how close they could come to the cup in one stroke.

The results in the putting contest follow:

H. R. Ziegler, 7—coffee, Consumers Co.; W. Stuart, 8 — motor oil, Standard Oil Co.; Jack Cooper, Jr., 8—coffee, Consumers Co.; Fred Boon, 8—malt, Economy Fruit Store.

Jack Cooper, the young boy from Kansas City, was undoubtedly the star of the day. An 81 on the Brainerd course, for a player unfamiliar with it, is shooting golf. Jack got first place in the medal play, second in the driving contest and third in the putting. In addition to being a good golfer, Jack is a modest, unassuming lad, and won the hearts of the gallery.

The tournament committee, on behalf of the Country club, wants to express its sincere appreciation of the spirit in which the merchants contributed these prizes. Without these prizes, a tournament of this kind could not be held, and the Brainerd Country club, because it is still struggling, still needs the hearty co-operation of the business houses of the city who see in the Brainerd Country club another means of increasing the tourist traffic in the community. If the present splendid progress of the club continues, in a few years they will not need to solicit prizes.

The committee also extends its thanks to Mrs. M. E. Ryan and Mrs. H. C. Herzog who served the lunch.

Mrs. Chapin described her sensations to me just as I had found them. When Charlotte Chapin had exerted herself to the limit in gaining a lead of 5-2 in the deciding set against Mrs. Mallory, and Molla started to climb back, Charlotte said she was so exhausted she could not go on. But she knew she must. She played on her nerve until she thought she would drop. Then suddenly came her second wind at a moment when she needed it, a gift from the gods. A refreshed Charlotte went on to the greatest victory of her career.

"LONDON TO LONDON" SETS OUT TODAY

AIRPLANE SIR JOHN CARLING TAKES OFF FROM ONTARIO

CAPTAIN TERRY TULLY AND LIEUT. JAMES METCALF ABOARD PLANE

London, Ont. Aug. 29.—(UP) — The "London to London" airplane Sir John Carling took off from the flying field here at 5:50 A. M. eastern daylight time for London, England.

Captain Terry Tully and Lieut. James Metcalf were aboard the plane.

The plane is a Stinson-Detroiter, similar to the one in which the Schlee-Brock around the world flight is being made. It has a Wright Whirlwind motor of 225 horsepower and a maximum speed of 128 miles per hour.

The plane carried 450 gallons of gasoline.

The projected course of the flight leads from London, Ontario, over Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and then over a route closely following the "Lindbergh trail" to Croydon airdrome, near London.

London, Ont., Aug. 29.—The Sir John Carling, London to London flight plane, returned here before noon today, after running into dense fog and heavy rain over Lake Ontario.

Captain Terry Tully and Lt. Jas. Metcalf had hopped off from here at 6 o'clock on an attempt to fly to oLndon, England, without a stop.

ern England trying to locate themselves that the reason for the delayed arrival was known.

Everybody was wondering what had gone wrong, and feeling that the fliers might have landed somewhere along the coast, when, at 10:32 A. M., a yellow monoplane was sighted. It was flying low and headed for Croydon field.

Four minutes later the plane, after circling the field once, made a perfect landing. It was the Pride of Detroit. The crowd of 200, mostly newspapermen, cameramen, and officials and mechanics of the field, rushed forward. Mounted police held them back and admitted only newspapermen, photographers and a few officials.

Brock and Schlee climbed out of the plane looking not one bit tired. Several in the crowd boosted them up on their shoulders and carried them to the front of the machine.

The first thing the fliers did was to ask for cigarets and lights. Then Brock told of the flight.

"For the first 1,200 miles flying conditions were fine," he said. "After that we encountered fog which, except for a few clear spots, continued the rest of the way.

"In mid-Atlantic we had to go 10,000 up to get clear of the fog. It was still foggy when we reached Plymouth.

"After reaching Plymouth we lost our way and had to drop messages asking where we were.

"We ate only one sandwich on the way over and drank water and cold black coffee. I had no sleep."

The fliers went through the customs like ordinary air passengers, but as they had no baggage that didn't take long. Croydon officials gave them whiskey and sodas.

"The first thing I want to do is sleep," said Schlee.

They were put into an automobile. The crowd cheered as the car left for London.

Brock said the plane had used gas at the rate of only nine and a half gallons an hour, and had consumed only two gallons of oil all the way from Newfoundland.

He said they flew the entire distance with the throttle about three-quarters of the way open, the engine making 1,625 revolutions per minute, whereas it was capable of making 2,000.

It was found on measuring the fuel tanks that enough gasoline was left to have kept the plane in the air seven hours longer.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 29.—In addition to rejoicing over the success of the "Pride of Detroit" in spanning the Atlantic, the motor city watched preparations today for four more long-distance flights, two of which expected to get under way before sundown.

Across the Detroit river at Windsor, the "Royal Windsor" monoplane was poised for a non-stop flight to Windsor, England, her pilot, C. A. "Duke" Schiller, and Navigator Philip S. Wood awaiting only favorable weather reports, and tentatively planning to start at 1 P. M.

Farther east in Ontario, the "Sir John Carling" took off at 5:50 A. M. today at London on a non-stop flight to London, Eng. Capt. Terry Tully and Lt. Metcalf were navigators of the plane. They returned however, before noon, having run into dense fog and rain over Lake Ontario.

At Northville, Mich., Ruth Elder, Alabama aviatrix, and her navigator George W. Haderman, of Florida, inspected Miss Elder's new Stinson Detroiter monoplane, with which they will attempt next month to duplicate Lindbergh's flight to Paris.

To the south at Wyandotte, Mich., Capt. Frederick A. Giles, the English pilot, tinkered with his Hess biplane, and hoped to hop off later this week on a one-man flight to Wellington, New Zealand, involving one trans-oceanic span of approximately 4,700 miles.

"The Whirlwind of Youth" opening an engagement of two days at the Lyceum theatre yesterday proved to be one of the most pleasing bits of entertainment that has come our way for many weeks.

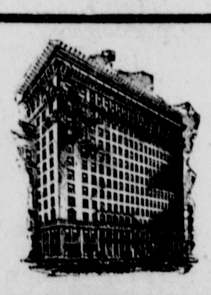

As the title indicates this adaptation of A. Hamilton Gibbs' novel "Soundings" deals with "youth" and its cast is composed of fresh young players who are a positive delight on the screen. Lois Moran, Paramount's new star, contributes a characterization that brings out all her sweet lack of sophistication.

LADY INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES TRUCKS

A $5,000 Prize Bull, Owned by Echo Stock Farm Also Hurt in Crash

ON HIGHWAY NO. 19

Mrs. John W. Shaffer, Minneapolis, Cut About Face and Body With Flying Glass

The condition of Mrs. John W. Shaffer, Minneapolis, seriously injured in an automobile crash on Highway No. 19 last evening about 7:20 o'clock was reported to be improving today at the local hospital.

A $5,000 bull also hurt is part of the toll of accident when the coupe in which Mrs. Shaffer was riding crashed into the rear of two standing trucks, seven miles out of Brainerd on the highway.

In the Buick coupe were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Shaffer and two children, of 3737 Colfax Avenue, Minneapolis. Mrs. Shaffer, cut about the face and body with flying glass was rushed to the St. Joseph's hospital. Others received minor injuries.

The rear truck which was first hit and its load of a prize $5,000 Holstein bull weighing 2600 pounds and three calves, owned by the Echo Stock Farm of Brainerd, was thrown off the highway by the impact of the collision. The bull may have a leg broken.

The coupe kept on and hit the second truck and the stock farm herdsman made a flying leap to escape being crushed between car and truck. The second truck carried 22 hogs, a load of 4500 pounds and did not receive much damage. It was owned by Leo Norwood. This truck had stopped to put on a new tire.

Both trucks carried stock which had been exhibited at the Crow Wing County Fair at Pequot and was being taken to the Pillager fair for exhibition.

Mr. Shaffer claimed that lights from cars approaching blinded him so that he was unable to see the trucks ahead of him on the highway.

"WHAT DO WE LOOK LIKE AFTER DARK"

Nearly Every Town Has Prosperous Appearance in the Day Time

R. E. WYETT INTERVIEWED

Says Well Lighted Streets and Store Windows Reflect Greeting to Tourists

"Nearly every town in the country presents a prosperous appearance during the day," says R. E. Wyett, manager of the J. C. Penney Co., store. "What do we look like after dark?"

"There is where many towns are getting ahead at the present time and making themselves known throughout the country.

"Much of the motor car tourist travel reaches town after the stores are closed. It is the habit of the tourist to drive all day and then stop at the nearest town at the approach of dark.

"What buying he does is done in the morning before the start for the next day's run.

"Whether the buying is done in town or is held over for the next town depends on the kind of reception he gets when he drives in.

"Well lighted main streets, store windows that are lighted at least until midnight, all reflect a cheery sort of welcome that invites the visitor to stop over for a few hours in the morning.

"Word of mouth advertising of a town spreads fast and far. A tourist who stops here tonight and next day tells someone fifty miles from here, "that this is a good town," is a business builder for local merchants.

"An organization of local merchants and other business men which will make it their business to see that the streets are attractive at night will be doing a real service to the town and building new sales for themselves.

"There are nearly 900 J. C. Penney Co. stores at the present time. These stores are located in every kind of a community. And every manager says that 'what we look like at night' is back of a lot of the business we do in the day time."

BANDIT WOUNDED IN EXCHANGE OF FIRE

Blood Tracks in Pillager Store Show That Peter Nelson Hit One Before He Died

NINE SHOTS FIRED

Officials of Three Counties Work Together to Track Down Killers

Officials of three counties, Cass, Crow Wing and Morrison, are maintaining a careful lookout for the two bandits who entered the Bacon General Store Friday night at Pillager and fatally injured Peter Nelson, aged watchman who attempted to frustrate the robbery.

It developed today that Peter Nelson wounded one of the bandits when he discharged the 12 guage shot gun that he carried in his hand when he surprised the pair in the store.

Nelson dropped to the floor after a heavy volley of fire had been exchanged. Bullet marks in the walls of the store show that the bandits shot nine times supposedly from an automatic, two of the bullets entering the body of Nelson, one through his eye.

The gun battle was staged just following the time when the bandits had pilfered the change from the cash register. Currency amounting to $25 and a flashlight were found on the floor near the counter.

Blood marks to the door reveal that one of the bandits was struck by the volley of shot from the shot gun. Using this as a clue, Cass county officials working with the Crow Wing county sheriff's department made a careful search throughout the city and county to determine whether anyone had received gun wounds. Doctors were questioned as to whether they had treated anyone with gun wounds.

Every effort is being made to track the criminals and bring them to justice.

LADY INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES TRUCKS

A $5,000 Prize Bull, Owned by Echo Stock Farm Also Hurt in Crash

ON HIGHWAY NO. 19

Mrs. John W. Shaffer, Minneapolis, Cut About Face and Body With Flying Glass

The condition of Mrs. John W. Shaffer, Minneapolis, seriously injured in an automobile crash on Highway No. 19 last evening about 7:20 o'clock was reported to be improving today at the local hospital.

A $5,000 bull also hurt is part of the toll of accident when the coupe in which Mrs. Shaffer was riding crashed into the rear of two standing trucks, seven miles out of Brainerd on the highway.

In the Buick coupe were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Shaffer and two children, of 3737 Colfax Avenue, Minneapolis. Mrs. Shaffer, cut about the face and body with flying glass was rushed to the St. Joseph's hospital. Others received minor injuries.

The rear truck which was first hit and its load of a prize $5,000 Holstein bull weighing 2600 pounds and three calves, owned by the Echo Stock Farm of Brainerd, was thrown off the highway by the impact of the collision. The bull may have a leg broken.

The coupe kept on and hit the second truck and the stock farm herdsman made a flying leap to escape being crushed between car and truck. The second truck carried 22 hogs, a load of 4500 pounds and did not receive much damage. It was owned by Leo Norwood. This truck had stopped to put on a new tire.

Both trucks carried stock which had been exhibited at the Crow Wing County Fair at Pequot and was being taken to the Pillager fair for exhibition.

Mr. Shaffer claimed that lights from cars approaching blinded him so that he was unable to see the trucks ahead of him on the highway.

"WHAT DO WE LOOK LIKE AFTER DARK"

Nearly Every Town Has Prosperous Appearance in the Day Time

R. E. WYETT INTERVIEWED

Says Well Lighted Streets and Store Windows Reflect Greeting to Tourists

"Nearly every town in the country presents a prosperous appearance during the day," says R. E. Wyett, manager of the J. C. Penney Co., store. "What do we look like after dark?"

"There is where many towns are getting ahead at the present time and making themselves known throughout the country.

"Much of the motor car tourist travel reaches town after the stores are closed. It is the habit of the tourist to drive all day and then stop at the nearest town at the approach of dark.

"What buying he does is done in the morning before the start for the next day's run.

"Whether the buying is done in town or is held over for the next town depends on the kind of reception he gets when he drives in.

"Well lighted main streets, store windows that are lighted at least until midnight, all reflect a cheery sort of welcome that invites the visitor to stop over for a few hours in the morning.

"Word of mouth advertising of a town spreads fast and far. A tourist who stops here tonight and next day tells someone fifty miles from here, 'that this is a good town,' is a business builder for local merchants.

"An organization of local merchants and other business men which will make it their business to see that the streets are attractive at night will be doing a real service to the town and building new sales for themselves.

"There are nearly 900 J. C. Penney Co. stores at the present time. These stores are located in every kind of a community. And every manager says that 'what we look like at night' is back of a lot of the business we do in the day time."

World Getting Crowded

The greatest single change of the past one hundred years has been the rapid increase in the number of people inhabiting the earth. During that time the population of the world nearly doubled. A century ago it was less than 1,000,000,000. Today it is about 1,700,000,000.—American Magazine.

BANDIT WOUNDED IN EXCHANGE OF FIRE

Blood Tracks in Pillager Store Show That Peter Nelson Hit One Before He Died

NINE SHOTS FIRED

Officials of Three Counties Work Together to Track Down Killers

Officials of three counties, Cass, Crow Wing and Morrison, are maintaining a careful lookout for the two bandits who entered the Bacon General Store Friday night at Pillager and fatally injured Peter Nelson, aged watchman who attempted to frustrate the robbery.

It developed today that Peter Nelson wounded one of the bandits when he discharged the 12 guage shot gun that he carried in his hand when he surprised the pair in the store.

Nelson dropped to the floor after a heavy volley of fire had been exchanged. Bullet marks in the walls of the store show that the bandits shot nine times supposedly from an automatic, two of the bullets entering the body of Nelson, one through his eye.

The gun battle was staged just following the time when the bandits had pilfered the change from the cash register. Currency amounting to $25 and a flashlight were found on the floor near the counter.

Blood marks to the door reveal that one of the bandits was struck by the volley of shot from the shot gun. Using this as a clue, Cass county officials working with the Crow Wing county sheriff's department made a careful search throughout the city and county to determine whether anyone had received gun wounds. Doctors were questioned as to whether they had treated anyone with gun wounds.

Every effort is being made to track the criminals and bring them to justice.

Careful Dressers Demand Smartness

Chic Reigns Unconfined and Unrestrained, Fashion Writer Says.

Not all of the tremendous changes that have occurred in fashions during the last decade lie on the surface. Conceding that the waistline has simmered to nothingness from its once high estate, only to rise again; that the hemline has run its blithe course to the knees, that sleeves are no longer leg-o-mutton, that swishing and ever so feminine demoiselles have been replaced by a lithe race of moderns to whom petticoat is only an archaic term, the mode has undergone a still deeper change, not visible to the eye. In the matter of sartorial taste, about which early and late Victorians were so meticulous, fashion has experienced an evolution or a revolution, which goes to its essence.

Among other things, observes a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, there is the question of formal dress. Anyone whose memory reaches beyond the war can recollect the often absurd emphasis placed then upon correct clothes. There could be no confusing of the frocks that were to be worn for informal occasions and those intended for the dance or formal dinner. If you were in doubt, recourse to an etiquette book would point the proper path—if by chance you selected wrongly you became at once the lively topic of the evening's conversation. So firm was the grip of convention on fashions that even a ukase from Paris could not shake it. Yet today there is scarcely left a vestige of the old dogma. Beyond certain wide and not too clearly defined limits, you may wear what you will.

Attitude Toward Smartness.

Colors were another topic upon which the good Victorian dilated at length. From the rostrum of just such pages as these it would be announced that blues were not to be worn with greens—or grays with mauve. The information was not merely set forth as an opinion or a fact—it was importantly put forward as a decree, not to be disobeyed. Often exhaustive color charts were compiled purporting to show just which were the harmonious liaisons. In this instance, too, the past has effectively buried its lamented. The smart color combinations of today are anything but catholic—they would have been as bizarre in the past as a bob-haired girl walking the streets in knee-length frocks. The solemn color dictators have also been relegated to the musty archives of fashion's history.

But the most significant and least realized of fashion's changes is the modern attitude toward smartness. A decade ago there was operative an invisible censor of dress, posing under the name of good taste. It was the quaint conceit of this censor that chic was a status to be arrived at mysteriously and without apparent effort. The really smart woman of that epoch conveyed the impression that she paid less than the prescribed amount of attention to her clothes. She was well gowned—she dared to incorporate a few of the newest Paris quirks, but she was always careful to screen her interest in fashion behind a mask of well affected nonchalance. She was chic, but not too chic. The slightest overemphasis of style would classify her as a woman of something less than irreproachable taste.

Washable Sports Frock of Yellow-Green Crepe de Chine.

Today she may cast all those inhibitions aside—the new chic reigns unconfined and unrestrained. The ancient barriers have been thoroughly swept aside. No longer does the haute mondaine achieve chic by stealth and blush modestly to find it fame. Smartness today is sought for frankly and vividly. If Paris sends over ten new themes, the more of them you adopt the better dressed you will be. The restraints of good taste, so potent a decade ago, have joined the innumerable caravan—to dress quietly and with no great eclat is rapidly becoming a lost art, indulged in by only the merest few in the upper sartorial flights. As a rule of fashion it no longer exists.

For the younger generation, with their insistent candor, have decided to unmask yet another foible. Not only do they concede their tremendous urge toward personal beauty, but they feel as well the necessity for announcing it in clarion tones to all who will listen. The result is a completely changed viewpoint toward clothes, and, of course, an insatiate demand for new and ever original dress themes. In these days there is no such thing as being too smart.

Wool Georgette.

To the list of smart materials—chiffon, crepe romain, georgette, silk voile, cotton voile, wool voile, lace—one must now add another thin material—wool georgette, called "gioldanah." Worth uses this wool georgette in a beautiful blue, delphinium, a color made especially for them. "Faites vos feux" is an ensemble in beige wool georgette, by Worth, in which the coat is self-lined. The blouse has bar stitching in the body and lower half of the sleeves in which brown, beige and cream combine with vertical stitches in gold. The sleeves and tie are in silk georgette, while a chiffon flower in tone appears on the coat, which has long, easy revers caught in a bow at the waist. Both frock and coat skirts have clustered plaits. Another ensemble is in gray romain, with a pale yellow blouse trimmed with blue bands and a broad pearl necklace sewn on.

Beige Wool Georgette; May Be Fall and Winter Favorite.

Both plain pastel-tinted chiffons and those in small or large prints have no limit in the list of thin dresses. Self scarfs, staircase plaited tiers, flounces, bows and jabots all add their notes to the mode in the make-up of the chiffon frock. Back dips of fullness in the evening skirt and side dips in those for afternoon and evening gather into place to determine the lengthened skirt.

Dyed Laces Used.

Dyed laces in pastel and bright tones as well as navy blue and black follow many of the lines portrayed in the chiffon frock. Lace unites in folds and bands with chiffon and georgette, while sometimes frocks of organdie may be banded by narrow edges of lace. Jenny makes numerous frocks for dinner wear in dotted black net, such as one with an exceedingly full front in the skirt trimmed with graduated bands of velvet ribbons. Both lace and chiffon types often have little boleros or sleeveless jackets to add to the fluffiness, while the afternoon lace frock, particularly as worn at the races, has its long coat in lace as well, with a back dip introduced most subtly, and rather full, uncuffed sleeves.

Women who adopted the leghorn hat for sumer wear favored the simple ribbon-trimmed type, while the slightly draped crown had the little folds solidly overstitched in silk to match the band. Now and again this embroidery took the shape of three triangles linked vertically, and at a distance these had the illusion of being a monogram.

For autumn the type is substantially the same. The first models of the Paris modistes have seen the light of day, and while there are perhaps fewer generally large hats, there is greater gusto for the moderate shapes as against the more petite.

Large, small and medium types are sanctioned by the Paris modistes for autumn, and the greatest of these is the last.

Jeweled Pins

Jeweled pins in the form of a tiny Buddha ornament trim some of the close-fitting felt hats. Jade, lapis and coral are used for these ornaments and some are fashioned entirely of brilliants.

HOLLYWOOD HORROR

Phillida had gone to an exhibition of pictures. Not that she knew anything about art, but it was the thing to do.

"Hullo, Miss Phillida," said a clever young artist, as she stood gazing at an oil painting. "I see you are interested in art."

Phillida turned her lovely, vacant eyes on the speaker.

"Me?" she said, "Art who?"

He'd Figured It Out

The marriage had just been performed. The high-powered young business man groom turned to the preacher. "Well, what do I owe you?"

"Ah—er—whatever you think it's worth."

"Good enough and a fair proposition. I'll give you 15 per cent of her earnings for the next year, less her cost to me."

AWFUL PREDICAMENT

"Vivian's in an awful predicament."

"What's the matter?"

Careful Dressers Demand Smartness

Chic Reigns Unconfined and Unrestrained, Fashion Writer Says.

Not all of the tremendous changes that have occurred in fashions during the last decade lie on the surface. Conceding that the waistline has simmered to nothingness from its once high estate, only to rise again; that the hemline has run its blithe course to the knees, that sleeves are no longer leg-o-mutton, that swishing and ever so feminine demoiselles have been replaced by a lithe race of moderns to whom petticoat is only an archaic term, the mode has undergone a still deeper change, not visible to the eye. In the matter of sartorial taste, about which early and late Victorians were so meticulous, fashion has experienced an evolution or a revolution, which goes to its essence.

Among other things, observes a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, there is the question of formal dress. Anyone whose memory reaches beyond the war can recollect the often absurd emphasis placed then upon correct clothes. There could be no confusing of the frocks that were to be worn for informal occasions and those intended for the dance or formal dinner. If you were in doubt, recourse to an etiquette book would point the proper path—if by chance you selected wrongly you became at once the lively topic of the evening's conversation. So firm was the grip of convention on fashions that even a ukase from Paris could not shake it. Yet today there is scarcely left a vestige of the old dogma. Beyond certain wide and not too clearly defined limits, you may wear what you will.

Attitude Toward Smartness.

Colors were another topic upon which the good Victorian dilated at length. From the rostrum of just such pages as these it would be announced that blues were not to be worn with greens—or grays with mauve. The information was not merely set forth as an opinion or a fact—it was importantly put forward as a decree, not to be disobeyed. Often exhaustive color charts were compiled purporting to show just which were the harmonious liaisons. In this instance, too, the past has effectively buried its lamented. The smart color combinations of today are anything but catholic—they would have been as bizarre in the past as a bob-haired girl walking the streets in knee-length frocks. The solemn color dictators have also been relegated to the musty archives of fashion's history.

But the most significant and least realized of fashion's changes is the modern attitude toward smartness. A decade ago there was operative an invisible censor of dress, posing under the name of good taste. It was the quaint conceit of this censor that chic was a status to be arrived at mysteriously and without apparent effort. The really smart woman of that epoch conveyed the impression that she paid less than the prescribed amount of attention to her clothes. She was well gowned—she dared to incorporate a few of the newest Paris quirks, but she was always careful to screen her interest in fashion behind a mask of well affected nonchalance. She was chic, but not too chic. The slightest overemphasis of style would classify her as a woman of something less than irreproachable taste.

Washable Sports Frock of Yellow-Green Crepe de Chine.

Today she may cast all those inhibitions aside—the new chic reigns unconfined and unrestrained. The ancient barriers have been thoroughly swept aside. No longer does the haute mondaine achieve chic by stealth and blush modestly to find it fame. Smartness today is sought for frankly and vividly. If Paris sends over ten new themes, the more of them you adopt the better dressed you will be. The restraints of good taste, so potent a decade ago, have joined the innumerable caravan—to dress quietly and with no great eclat is rapidly becoming a lost art, indulged in by only the merest few in the upper sartorial flights. As a rule of fashion it no longer exists.

For the younger generation, with their insistent candor, have decided to unmask yet another foible. Not only do they concede their tremendous urge toward personal beauty, but they feel as well the necessity for announcing it in clarion tones to all who will listen. The result is a completely changed viewpoint toward clothes, and, of course, an insatiate demand for new and ever original dress themes. In these days there is no such thing as being too smart.

Wool Georgette.

To the list of smart materials—chiffon, crepe romain, georgette, silk voile, cotton voile, wool voile, lace—one must now add another thin material—wool georgette, called "giolanah." Worth uses this wool georgette in a beautiful blue, delphinium, a color made especially for them. "Faites vos feux" is an ensemble in beige wool georgette, by Worth, in which the coat is self-lined. The blouse has bar stitching in the body and lower half of the sleeves in which brown, beige and cream combine with vertical stitches in gold. The sleeves and tie are in silk georgette, while a chiffon flower in tone appears on the coat, which has long, easy revers caught in a bow at the waist. Both frock and coat skirts have clustered plaits. Another ensemble is in gray romain, with a pale yellow blouse trimmed with blue bands and a broad pearl necklace sewn on.

Beige Wool Georgette; May Be Fall and Winter Favorite.

Both plain pastel-tinted chiffons and those in small or large prints have no limit in the list of thin dresses. Self scarfs, staircase plaited tiers, flounces, bows and jabots all add their notes to the mode in the make-up of the chiffon frock. Back dips of fullness in the evening skirt and side dips in those for afternoon and evening gather into place to determine the lengthened skirt.

Dyed Laces Used.

Dyed laces in pastel and bright tones as well as navy blue and black follow many of the lines portrayed in the chiffon frock. Lace unites in folds and bands with chiffon and georgette, while sometimes frocks of organdie may be banded by narrow edges of lace. Jenny makes numerous frocks for dinner wear in dotted black net, such as one with an exceedingly full front in the skirt trimmed with graduated bands of velvet ribbons. Both lace and chiffon types often have little boleros or sleeveless jackets to add to the fluffiness, while the afternoon lace frock, particularly as worn at the races, has its long coat in lace as well, with a back dip introduced most subtly, and rather full, uncuffed sleeves.

Women who adopted the leghorn hat for sumer wear favored the simple ribbon-trimmed type, while the slightly draped crown had the little folds solidly overstitched in silk to match the band. Now and again this embroidery took the shape of three triangles linked vertically, and at a distance these had the illusion of being a monogram.

For autumn the type is substantially the same. The first models of the Paris modistes have seen the light of day, and while there are perhaps fewer generally large hats, there is greater gusto for the moderate shapes as against the more petite.

Large, small and medium types are sanctioned by the Paris modistes for autumn, and the greatest of these is the last.

Jeweled Pins

Jeweled pins in the form of a tiny Buddha ornament trim some of the close-fitting felt hats. Jade, lapis and coral are used for these ornaments and some are fashioned entirely of brilliants.

Just a Little Smile

HOLLYWOOD HORROR

Phillida had gone to an exhibition of pictures. Not that she knew anything about art, but it was the thing to do.

"Hullo, Miss Phillida," said a clever young artist, as she stood gazing at an oil painting. "I see you are interested in art."

Phillida turned her lovely, vacant eyes on the speaker.

"Me?" she said, "Art who?"

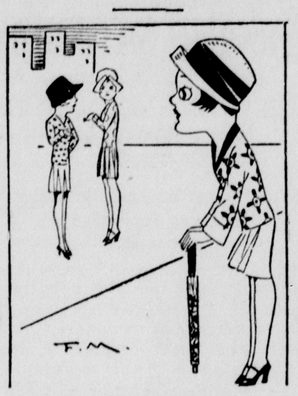

He'd Figured It Out

The marriage had just been performed. The high-powered young business man groom turned to the preacher. "Well, what do I owe you?"

"Ah—er—whatever you think it's worth."

"Good enough and a fair proposition. I'll give you 15 per cent of her earnings for the next year, less her cost to me."

"What's the matter?"

"The man she was engaged to at the summer resort is actually writing love letters to her now that she's home."
